The active claims are 1-28.

Claims 1-28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The term "connectable" is vague and indefinite.

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 24-28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

A program is not one of four patentable subject matters. The defect can be remedied by changing the preamble as follow:

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

The changes made to 35 U.S.C. 102(e) by the American Inventors Protection Act of 1999 (AIPA) and the Intellectual Property and High Technology Technical Amendments Act of 2002 do not apply when the reference is a U.S. patent resulting directly or indirectly from an international application filed before November 29, 2000.

Art Unit: 2155

Therefore, the prior art date of the reference is determined under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) prior to the amendment by the AIPA (pre-AIPA 35 U.S.C. 102(e)).

Claims 1-28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by either Ishibashi (USP 6,694,440) or Kobayashi (USP 7,058,825).

See at least the abstract, columns 1-3, Figures 2, 7 and 8 and the description thereof in Ishibashi. See the abstract, Figure 3, 5 and 7 and the description thereof in Kobayashi. See also the description Link-on and/or wake up signal in the two applied references. See also the detecting step in claim 6 of Ishibashi. Ishibashi and Kobayashi respectively teach:

In a receiving computer system (the system receiving the Link-on or wake up signal) that is network connectable to an IEEE 1394 network (abstracts and the 1394 in both references), a method for waking a link layer (the Link-on signal and/or wake up signal is for waking up the link layer) at the receiving computer system, the method comprising:

an act of a physical layer receiving a network packet (the Link-on packet, see line 58 of column 4 in '440 and see line 56 of column 3 in '825) from a sending computer system, the sending computer system being network connectable to the IEEE 1394 network;

an act of the physical layer parsing (inherent, extracting the byte from packet) a plurality of bytes of packet data contained in the received network packet;

an act of comparing (see the step of detecting in claim 6 of '440 and see the authenticating step in the abstract of '825) at least a portion of the packet data to rule data in a physical layer rule register; and an act of determining if the physical layer is to assert a link on signal based on the results of the comparison, the Link On signal being a signal that, when received at the link layer, wakes (the Link-on signal or the wake up signal is for activating the link layer) the corresponding link layer.

As to the dependent, label of a packet does not constitute any patentable subject matter and do not affect the operation of the system.

HOCI interface is well known in 1394 network.
